

GEN. HOWARD TESTIFIES.

SOME CRITICISMS OF THE CAMP AT CHICKAMAUGA.

He thinks things would have been much better if the Commanding Officer of the Camp had had full control. "I don't like bureaucracy," he exclaims.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Col. Denby and Gen. John M. Wilson, the only members of the War Investigating Commission remaining in Washington, held a session this morning and examined Gen. O. O. Howard, retired, a delegate of the Army and Navy Christian Commission. Gen. Howard described the work of the commission at Chickamauga, Jacksonville, Tampa, Port Tampa, Mobile and Camp Alger, Va., and the conditions as he observed them at those places. He noticed a bad odor about some of the buildings and camps at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga, and went immediately to Gen. Brooke's headquarters, but did not see him. He saw the chief surgeon and suggested the use of lime, but was informed that over thirty barrels of lime had been distributed that morning. Gen. Howard was afraid that the offensive odor might cause an increase of sickness. He saw a large number of men going to the canteen where beer was sold. In his opinion the canteen was injurious, particularly so when the men also ate of improper food purchased from numerous vendors. He doubted if physicians have yet discovered the cause of typhoid fever.

Gen. Howard had little to say in the way of criticism. Once he remarked on the use of female nurses and commended the idea. Col. Denby asked if he thought they should be organized into a corps. "I don't like bureaucracy," he exclaimed.

Gen. Wilson was anxious to know what was meant by this remark.

"I don't like the idea of putting everything on one man in Washington," he said. "Take the camp at Chickamauga. If the commanding officer had had entire control it would have been better."

This did not quite satisfy Gen. Wilson and he pressed the witness further.

"Gen. Brooke," he said, "had great difficulty in obtaining answers to communications to Washington touching supplies."

"That was an important remark of yours, Gen. Howard, and I would like to know just what you meant by bureaucracy," said Gen. Wilson. "Was the camp at Chickamauga run from Washington?"

"Well, if I had my way I would not put the whole care and responsibility of the medical arrangements in camp upon the Surgeon-General in Washington. I would give surgeons to the commanding officer of the camp and let him have charge of everything."

"Did you have the impression that Gen. Brooke had not absolute command of his camp?"

"I did not have his camp in mind particularly,"

"You suggested that somebody suffered from bureaucracy?"

"I think they did. Take my old department, the Ordnance Department. A requisition is made on that department from a camp and sent to Washington for instance. It requires examination and it takes a long time to get the supplies. If you have not at the camp an ordnance officer on hand the supplies could be secured right there without requisition to Washington. There was great difficulty in getting ordnance. I thought the Ordnance Department was being run more from Washington than from the field."

Gen. Wilson said that he agreed with Gen. Howard that there was a great deal of time lost in making preparations, getting supplies and such things, of course, it would have been better. The regular army was small, and I think the work was incredible. I think we have learned a lesson. If I had my way again I would not send the men to Tampa, New Orleans or such places to let them go to a more malarious country."

"Where would you have kept them?" inquired Col. Denby.

"Well, in the vicinity of New York."

"Would you have kept them in their State camps?"

"No, sir. Take the men who were at Fort Mifflin. They were in perfect health. Most people say to get the men vaccinated."

"That is what the War Department thought," inquired Col. Denby.

"I don't agree with that idea," said Gen. Howard.

He believed the retired army officers could have been of service in the war had the law permitted their being assigned to duty. In his opinion the President should have discretionary power to assign them to duty. He had tried to get an assignment, but the law prohibited it. It might be better not to put them in competition with the younger officers of the regular army.

"Yes, sir," replied Gen. Howard.

Gen. Howard alluded to a compelling volunteer officers to pass satisfactory examinations before being accepted. As to the men, he said, he would like to see more of better physical qualifications. "The government should nominate the officers just the same, but their nomination would be subject to the result of an examination."

"Another good thing," he said, "would be the establishment of a staff school for the training of officers for staff duty. The lives of thousands of men might be saved by a staff officer. At Chickamauga the blunder of one officer caused the troops to move in the wrong way and left a position open where Longstreet went right through. This is true of all the departments. Take the Adjutant-General's office. Take a young man going to West Point and let him pass and permitted to resign. He secures assignment as an Assistant Adjutant-General. I would not like to put a man like that in such a position."

Gen. Howard concluded with a reference to the trip of the surgeon from Santiago, saying that he found men who complained of not getting enough to eat, but on the trip food was finally provided, and when the vessel arrived at New York the soldiers thought more of the government than they did when they started.
